The team at Grand Seiko has told me, however, that this will be the last iteration of the Kodo's light and shadow interplay series. The brand is no stranger to playing the hits ??? its dress watches, GMTs, and chronographs all meld Japanese modern design with classic styling, but nothing showed the full force of their skill like the Kodo.

The 30-jewel 9R65 movement technology is amazing. The <Grand Seiko-invented> Spring Drive's utilize a "TriSynchro Regulator" for power. Instead of a commonly-seen balance wheel and pallet fork escapement, there are small wheels that constantly rotate via the 72-hour barrel spring.

Thanks to the long power reserve, the movement runs precisely even after prolonged use, while the rate deviation is extremely low compared to other watches. The SBGA211 is almost identical to the SBGA011, with the new Grand Seiko logo, the "GS" in Fraktur script, emblazoned on the dial. It has the same Springdrive movement and the same

Series 9 also pulls from Grand Seiko's "Grammar of Design," a standard first embodied by the iconic 44GS from 1967. Two barrels, known as Twin Barrels, are featured in the 9SA5 and use long, thin mainsprings to achieve a power reserve of 80 hours. The third main breakthrough, which incorporates the Twin Barrels, is the Horizontal Gear

Also, as per GS manual: What is covered by the Grand Seiko warranty? We warrant free repair and adjustment service against any defects on the watch head (movement and case) and metallic band, provided that the watch was used as described in the instruction manual.

Grand Seiko's GS9 Club is an exclusive platform for Grand Seiko Collectors. Among those advancements are a power reserve of 120 hours (made possible via the movement's Dual-size Barrels) and a precision rating of +/- 10 seconds per month. SLGA013 is first 44GS timepiece to feature a 9RA-series caliber.

After thinking about it, I really think Seiko undervalued how much beautiful this is. I think this watch and it's series is one of their best under 1000$. From how the dial shines, the power reserve indicator, it's handset, to it's date at the bottom that looks like a micro seconds. Everything about it screams Grand Seiko.

Same. Looking forward to what else GS releases next. The new movement paired with the new Series 9 design language, Grand Seiko is looking more wearable/less dressy and thinner than ever. Also, GS is really finding their niche in-terms of hitting the textured/colored dials market. It's a big segment that isn't saturated by other brands.
