I would like to salute Oslo Energy Forum for setting agendas that reflect this transition. This forum has gone on for years. And I think, Sven (Mollekleiv), if you take the agendas and the programs and you lay them out, you will see part of that transition. I welcome Special Presidential Envoy John Kerry, tirelessly travelling on this route

Navigating this double challenge is at the core of the energy transition. And to be clear: High energy prices and a greater focus on energy security due to the war in Ukraine will not slow the long-term transition. In such challenging times, my sincere hope for this forum is to address cooperation, across borders and between energy partners.
